~1~

In a lab of science and discovery,
There lived a crab, a curious oddity.
With pincers sharp and eyes so keen,
A crab in the lab, a peculiar scene.

In beakers and flasks, experiments stirred,
While the crab scuttled, undeterred.
Through bubbling liquids and swirling mists, It explored the lab, amidst all the twists.

Its tiny claws clicked with gentle might,
Testing the limits, seeking insight.
In a realm of equations and formulas grand,
The crab found wonder, in grains of sand.

With each step it took, the lab came alive,
As the crab brought magic, where science thrived.
In the realm of logic, it danced on the edge,
A creature of the sea, with knowledge to pledge.

Through microscopes' lens, it peered at cells,
Unveiling secrets, like hidden spells.
From the mysteries of DNA's strand,
To the depths of atoms, the crab dared to expand.

In the heart of the lab, where minds unite,
The crab inspired dreams, both day and night.
Scientists watched in awe and delight,
As the crab's presence sparked their brightest light.

For the crab in the lab, a symbol became,
Of curiosity's fire, burning like a flame.
In the quest for knowledge, it held the key,
A testament to what wonders we could see.
